HAROLD ENARSON

AUDREY ENARSON

A TRIBUTE TO THE ENARSONS

History will best judge them during the years of misfortune and hardship when they made the insurmountable burdens of higher education seem at least bearable. And they shall be judged well, for the wisdom and style at which the high office upheld the largest university the nation has ever known.

Harold Enarson approached his work diligently, his entire character keyed to action and achievement. It was not the old "Give 'em Hell, Harry" style, nor did his character warrant a bronzed plate on his desk which could have read "The Bucks Stop Here." His eloquence on the stump was surpassed only by his compassion for the common good.

Unlike his predecessors, it was not a rare occasion to see him mingling with students. He could be seen eating with, talking to, even entertaining them, all the while with a smile that was unavoidably contagious. His wit was urbane, containing cadence of humor timely enough to catch one off guard, to dig deeply into the human psyche at any time, anyplace. The effect at the very least, was the capture of smiles from his audience, and at the most, an outburst of uncontrollable laughter.

Harold Enarson summed up his great reservoir of personal humor in the most pressing of circumstances. But it was not his way to temporarily find refuge from crushing responsibility. Humor was his greatest weapon. And it was this weapon which reflected heartfelt security and inspired the loyalty of his command.

Audrey Enarson rode the crest of these responsibilities. And more often than not, was intimately involved with her husband's crisis. For Ohio State had an uncanny ability to falter the weight of her burdens on an overworked president. But not only did the two confront these burdens over the years, but consistently sought the challenges of increased greatness and prosperity for OSU.

And prosper it did. During the term of their office which spanned the '70's, the university grew at an amazing rate. Change was visible where it hadn't been visible before. Only five years ago, the Enarsons had come to a meeting of the Student Council of University College held in Dean Mount's living room. The numbers of council members did not overwhelm them. The two Enarsons seemed to blend in naturally with all the noise, food, drinks, clanging dishes and dropping silverware. Questions were tossed among members in the Enarsons' effort to know everyone. "What's your name? CAP area? What do you want to major in?" Tidbits of information were exchanged for two hours until the council members retired to their own circle to begin the meeting. As the Enarsons prepared to leave, I approached them to ask about changes in the academic curriculum. "Why the increased amount of courses? And what had happened to some of the old courses that I had planned to take?"

Enarson and Vice President Mondale.

President Enarson straightened the collar on his overcoat and turned to face me. "The university is changing because the world is changing," he said. "Change is the inevitability of life. One must cope with the inevitability of change."

The Enarsons began their long adventure nine years ago, packed and ready to leave Cleveland State to tackle the greater giant. They took office in the most bewildering of times. Violence and hatred had ripped the campus. They served in an arena of divided ideology and extreme consternation. Yet it was not their way to force solutions, but to find them, with patience nobly born of wisdom and not pacifism. They had re-defined the purpose of students caught up in the "War Generation". And one may historically note as the Vietnam War swelled in 1972, Ohio State had reasonable calm while other major universities still suffered the albatross of violent confrontation.

Their realism was tempered by hope, and it was this hope for the future which inspired the seeds of idealism and made real the dreams that were yesterday, only dreams. It was not their fate that they came here but ours. Sometime, long ago, there must have been premonition to the crossroads we would take in the turbulent seventies. They created an ideal and charted the course toward the fulfillment of that ideal. The Enarsons have gone now, having fulfilled their purpose, yet with still much left to be done. The torch should not only be carried by their successors but by us all. If higher education is to survive, all must have the same drive and passion for excellence as they brought once upon a time.

It is grievous to reflect on an era gone by. I can walk across the oval to a windy autumn morning and reflect on the changing color of leaves falling about me. But then I could remember that President Enarson once said that we all must cope with the inevitability of change.

STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS

UNDERGRADUATE STUDENT GOVERNMENT

It could be said that the Undergraduate Student Government of Ohio State University is the mainstream of student politics on Ohio. And that would not be far from the truth. It is.

Undergraduate Student Government began in 1962, after a re-organization was formed to more effectively govern student life at Ohio State. Prior to 1962, there was a Student Senate that was elected by the Student Body according to living areas and various student organizations. The President and Vice-President of the Student Body were elected by the Senate members and not by a campus-wide election. There was no cabinet.

The Student Senate found itself limited in its ability to get major projects initiated or completed and came under attack from various student organizations. It was labeled ineffective and the cause of the trouble was not put on its Senate members but on the structure of the Student Senate itself.

The Student Senate underwent its first serious constitutional revision and became what is today Undergraduate Student Government. The transformation was dramatic, changing the election of the President and Vice-President to a campus-wide ballot. For the first time, the President and Vice-President were elected by the student body. A cabinet for the President was created. Thus the new Undergraduate Student Government had an executive branch to initiate and enforce projects that were approved by the Student Senate. In 1967, a second constitutional revision took place. The 15 Senate seats became 25, eliminating some student organizations and adding college area representation. The name changed from the Student Senate to the Student Assembly. A few years later, the 25 Assembly seats officially became a part of University Senate.

In 1970, Ohio State University was torn by riot and dissension. New anti-war organizations had sprung up overnight. Although few USG members involved themselves in the riots, 1970 USG President Jerome Friedman had been accused of minor involvement by the Columbus police, although no evidence was found to support the accusation against him. However, the USG of the 70's held a radical overtone which continued through the entire decade.

In 1978, a conservative coalition began in USG to oust the liberal element in control. USG involved itself in radical activities such as the May 4th Coalition and liberal policies such as cutting of university aid to corporations with activity in South Africa. USG in 1977 condemned Israel and called for and copied the UN Resolution, equating "Zionism as Racism." USG supported and funded student organizations that actively created and stirred violence on campus.

In 1978, USG's conservative coalition began a wave of criticism in the funding procedures of USG. USG's funding came under attack by its members and by the press. By 1980, USG President Malcolm Taaffe returned the massive task of funding organizations to the Council on Student Affairs. New procedures were finally laid for the funding of student organizations, although even today, some work still needs doing.

Throughout the 70's, scandals rocked Undergraduate Student Government. In 1976, USG President Chris Kalis missed impeachment proceedings by one vote in the Student Assembly for allegedly making long distance phone calls that USG had paid for and faced another charge of stealing and selling USG property. Although he was not impeached and finished his term, he was later arrested by Columbus police on similar charges.

Larry Pollack, 1977 Greek Representative to USG and presidential aspirant, was brought to University Court on a charge of violating election by-laws in his re-election bid as Greek Representative. He was found innocent and subsequently won the election.

In 1978, USG donated $300.00 toward a bus ride to Kent State. Kent State was constructing a gymnasium on the site where four students died May 4, 1970. Acting on a tip from an informant at Kent, USG held an executive closed session to discuss the possibility of violence planned at the Kent State demonstration. USG cancelled its support of the bus ride and never issued the money to the May 4th Coalition. The Lantern blasted USG for the closed executive session. USG had violated two laws, the first being the Ohio "Sunshine" Law, which barred closed public sessions, and the second being its own constitution. After the funds had been authorized by the Student Assembly, it could only be withdrawn from the May 4th Coalition by the Student Assembly. The executive branch had no right to act on its own authority. Vice President "Tojo" Miclea said in a strong public statement, "We had to act decisively on ethical and moral grounds, not the legal issue. Lives may be at stake. People may be hurt." A week later, the May 4th Coalition stormed the gymnasium site, causing some damage. Police arrested various demonstrators, and some were injured. The Student Assembly at Ohio State and the Lantern dropped the heavy criticism and the issue died. A few months later, in Jan. of 1978, USG President Dana Lee resigned due to health reasons. Miclea became president.

The following year, USG President Paul Zock came under attack for indecisiveness and inaction involving violence upon OSU students in south campus bars. Discouraging USG participation in the issue, he fired one cabinet member for pressuring USG to take action, and threatened to fire anyone else who were involved. Lantern reporter, Sandy Theis, uncovered evidence of personal involvement with Zock and an employee of one of the bars. Zock ran for re-election in 1980 and was defeated by Malcom Taaffe, a member of his cabinet.

USG has had many successions in the past and each administration now promises something old and something new. In 1979, USG, under the direction of Tom Gormley, eliminated Saturday finals at Ohio State. Also, in 1979, USG led by Nancy Taglione, successfully froze tuition throughout Ohio. In 1980, USG saved the Citizen's Crime Reporting Project (CCRP) by successfully raising $100,000.00 from Columbus City Council and Ohio State University. USG resurrected the OSU yearbook and is still published today. USG lobbied and successfully put into law Student Health Insurance. Also in 1980, USG successfully brought to campus its first major U.S. Presidential candidate, John Anderson. USG successfully organized and published Student Evaluation of Teaching (SET) results. In 1980, USG had its 3rd Constitutional Convention, increasing its Assembly from 29 to 30. Freshman Senate and the College of Continuing Education were added to University Senate after many years of opposition. The Greeks were re-admitted to University Senate by USG after being excluded by USG in the early 70's. USG had caught up with the 80's.

All state universities have student governments which depend on USG for political action because of OSU's unique location in Columbus. The Undergraduate Student Government of the 1980's must be stronger than those of the past. Most of USG's major successes have occurred in the last few years. It has begun to show its strength.

The Ohio Staters were founded in 1933 by a coalition of students, faculty, and administrators. It was incorporated in 1935 as a non-profit service organization. The purpose of the Staters is to organize student efforts to engage in activities which will promote the welfare of Ohio State University and enhance its prestige.

Staters can be found anywhere, doing just about anything. If you have ever seen students with buckets and brushes cleaning William Oxley Thompson, they were Ohio Staters. If you have received seat cushions for home football games, the Ohio Staters got them for you. If you had ever taken a bus ride to the Ohio State-Michigan game in Michigan, the Ohio Staters arranged it. If you had ever watched the Wheelchair Olympics at Ohio State, the Staters did it. If you ever sat on the South Oval to watch the Renaissance Festival week, that was the Ohio Staters too. Ever walk down Buckeye Grove? Yup, the Staters did that too.

Now, all you graduates look at your degree. See the University's crest? Staters.

If that's not enough, the Ohio Staters created and formed the "Block O" section at all Ohio State home football games. And another thing, near rioting after Ohio State-Michigan games resulted in action by the Ohio Staters to form the OSU Sportsmanship Council. Their effort has been very successful, as evident in the 1980 Ohio State-Michigan game. The Ohio Staters have succeeded in raising the consciousness of OSU students where other organizations have failed.

And you thought they only did the Moneybag! They obviously do more. They even brought braille maps of campus to Ohio State's blind students. Other projects include campus bicycle air pumps and parking garages, Bicycle Safety Day, Ohio Skater Day and the Health Fair.

Not everyone can be an Ohio Stater. Membership is selective and is decided among the Ohio Staters. Its organization resembles that of a fraternity, but is not. The difference is that while fraternities and sororities occupy their time with activities with projects to benefit their respective houses and Greek system, the Ohio Staters promote their time with projects which will benefit the entire student body. The Ohio Staters are somewhat a cross breed between Undergraduate Student Government and the Greeks. Ohio Staters occupy positions of leadership throughout the student body at OSU. There are Staters on dorm councils, and campus associations, in fraternities and sororities, as heads of student organizations and occupying important positions in Undergraduate Student Government. And it is the Ohio Staters who produce and sponsor the Undergraduate Leadership Awards in the spring.

In order to give out awards, an awards committee is formed and applications for the award are distributed throughout the campus. Persons may nominate themselves for these awards by picking up and filling out an application, then turn it into the Office of Student Life in the Ohio Union. The awards committee then must decide from among the applicants who shall win an award.

The award given for Outstanding Leadership is called the "Buckeye Award," formally the Student Leader Award, and there are numerous other awards. There are the Outstanding Senior Awards, given to a member of graduating seniors in the spring, and there are the Outstanding Residence Hall Senior Awards, given from approximately 6 to 8 seniors every year.

Honoraries of every rank induct members at the Undergraduate Leadership Awards. These honoraries are "Chimes," "Bucket and Dipper," "Romophos (sophomore backwards)," "Mirrors," and "Sphinx," the Greek senior honorary. Students inducted into these organizations are honored for their scholastic achievements throughout their college career.

The principal problem behind giving awards for leadership is determining what leadership is, and which persons have best demonstrated that quality while enrolled as a student at Ohio State University.

The range of applicants varies, rich and poor, black and white, young and old. And awards are given in this same range, as the awards committee tackles the tough problem of determining who the "Outstanding leaders" are. While the awards committee has been fairly accurate in choosing the best for the awards, they have been subject to some criticism when the awards committee members give themselves a leadership award. The argument of conflict of interest was rebuffed by past committee members, claiming that the very reason they were chosen to be on the awards committee was to judge leadership. And only those chosen for the committee had to have displayed those qualities in order to qualify for the job. A study on the subject found that most committee members were leaders of top student organizations, and would have received the leadership awards anyway.

The issue, then, rested in the definition of leadership and its application to candidates for the leadership awards. How do you judge a leader and his/her capacity to lead? Leadership is defined in every dictionary as "the ability to go before . . . to show the way." While this definition is broad and universally accepted, it does not specifically cover the fine points of "how to lead," which is the central theme of leadership. Thus, a specific definition of leadership is nearly impossible. But leadership can be measured within one's own conscience, the motivating factor of one's own actions which gives one an ability to lead.

Leadership means forsaking oneself and one's own goals for the sake of others. Leadership is a social awareness. It is the ability to stand tall in the rising tide of opposition when you are right, and the ability to admit wrong when you are clearly wrong.

True leaders do not occupy committees or organizations and fail to interact. True leaders do not take credit for projects they really failed to do. True leaders do not stuff resumes. Instead they play down their personal accomplishments of their peers. Leaders recognize talent without envy, and use their own talents for others, not for recognition or for one's personal gain. The leader molds potential from the led into reality.

The Ohio Staters face the ominous task of recognizing those with true leadership abilities through efforts they put forth to serve the student body here at Ohio State. Meanwhile, the Staters will continue in the sponsorship and initiation of activities for the university. It would be well worth the time for students to do likewise.

WOSR is the only full-time radio staff made up entirely of Ohio State students. Behind the scenes are a professional group of young people operating production, advertising, and programming.

Presently, the station operates year-round, including summer. WOSR operates on a frequency of 540 AM and 99.9 FM. It broadcasts to all dorms and commons and recently added Warner AMEX cable FM service.

The station's general manager, Mike Ossing, while supervising operations at WOSR, is also operations assistant at WOSU. His radio show can be heard on Saturday mornings from 7 a.m. to 12 noon. Ossing plans to work in management in either radio or television after he graduates. He currently has 2½ years of broadcasting experience and as an OSU teaching assistant, has instructed television production at Ohio State. His major is Communications/Mass Media BA and has been floor director for WOSU-TV Channel 34.

WOSR broadcasts more new music than any radio station in central Ohio and provides the best radio experience a student can get. WOSR is perhaps the best outlet for progressive music and radio. The station's music library is mostly album-oriented rock (AOR) or progressive rock and roll, although one can occasionally hear a Dan Fogelberg song or a nostalgic James Taylor tune.

The station first began in autumn 1971, although campus radio had been on campus for some 20-25 years. Prior to WOSR, the campus radio station was WMRH, which broadcasted from Derby Hall. WMRH broadcast only to the men's residence halls, thus the "MRH" was "men's residence halls."

WOSR's extra-curricular campus activities were varied, and it was not unusual for past station managers to hold a campus-mobile rock show, whether at the Drake Union or on the South Oval. WOSR had broadcast many past USG presidential-vice presidential debates to the campus area. The future holds more of these debates, many of them heated confrontations which serve more to entertain than inform.

The station also broadcasts talk-shows and discussions with call-in audience participation.

In the future, Ossing plans to increase advertising income and attempt to broadcast (over the air waves) FM. WOSR's future will rest on its ability to capture mass audience appeal from its programming format of album-oriented rock and progressive new music, as well as additional funds needed to keep the station operating at full-strength as it does now.

So, as WOSR moves to the future, its crew can look back on accomplishment and triumph. Just ask Chris Solie. Solie was WOSR's 1979-80 general manager. She now can be heard broadcasting the news on 92X-FM.

WOSR does more than entertain.

GREEK LIFE . . .

The Greek System is as old as Ohio State itself. The first fraternity at OSU, Phi Gamma Delta, had risen up in the 1870's. Fraternities were "secret orders" back in the old days, with strange rituals and symbols based on mystic origins. Phi Gamma Delta adopted a skull and crossbones as their official crest. Later, Phi Gamma Delta would change their crest to what it is today.

Also in the 1870's, another fraternity arrived on campus — Phi Kappa Psi. In 1880, both Phi Kappa Psi and Phi Gamma Delta would together publish the first Ohio State University yearbook entitled "The Makio." The Makio is really "MA-KIO" and is Japanese for "Magic Mirror." The origin of why the two fraternities named it is unclear, but is believed that during the 1870's an OSU faculty member visited Japan and returned to the United States with much enthusiasm for the then existing Japanese dynasties which ruled. It is believed that this faculty member was involved with one of the two fraternities, most likely Phi Gamma Delta.

The first yearbook published was very small, very few pages, had no photos, and listed all graduating seniors at Ohio State in 1880. It's original logo was a skull and crossbones. There was no yearbook published in 1881, then in 1882, both fraternities again re-published the MAKIO. In 1883, an apparent rivalry between the two fraternities resulted in the publication of two MAKIO's, one by Phi Gamma Delta and another by Phi Kappa Psi. But since the Phi Gamma Delta MAKIO was copyrighted, it became the official record for that year. The two fraternities later would return to publish one MAKIO for Ohio State after 1884. By this time, Sigma Chi had joined the yearbook effort.

In 1893, due to the late-century depression, no yearbook was published. In 1896, the MAKIO became the "Scarlet and Gray." It returned to being the MAKIO in 1897, and continued publication uninterrupted until 1978, when the last MAKIO was published. Financial problems brought an end to the Ohio State yearbook. In 1979, there was no yearbook for Ohio State. Then exactly 100 years after Phi Gamma Delta and Phi Kappa Psi began the first in 1880, Undergraduate Student Government in 1980 began the yearbook again. The new yearbook was initiated by two USG members, one oddly enough was Malcolm Taaffe, a Phi Kappa Psi. The 1980 edition was the 98th volume of the Ohio State Yearbook. The 1981 edition you are reading is Volume 99. The Ohio State Yearbook will celebrate its 100th volume next year in a special centennial issue to be mentioned later. The yearbook has come a long way since 1880. In that first edition, there were no women involved and women would not be involved for many years. The 1880 Phi Gamma Deltas and Phi Kappa Psi's would turn in their graves to learn that in 1980, the yearbook editor, Kelly Sigler, is a woman. The 1980 edition was called "Relics 1980."

Today's Greek system has both fraternities and sororities. While every house chapter has its own philanthropy projects and social activities, both the Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC) and the Pan-Hellenic Association work together for special university-related projects.

Every year, brightly-colored floats line up on East 15th Avenue and 4000 Greeks make their annual trek down fraternity row toward Ohio Stadium. It is one of Homecoming's biggest events, beaten only by the crowning of the Homecoming King and Queen, and the Court. The main event, of course, is the game itself.

The Delta Gamma's hold an annual "Anchor Splash" in which the sorority pits fraternities and sororities against each other in games of wit, skill, and just plain fun. Besides sponsoring a series of grueling swimming meets in Larkins Hall, the D.G.'s also hold a "Mr. OSU" contest, where fraternities send out their best-bodied men in an attempt to win the crown for their house. The fraternity or sorority with the highest number of points at the end of the contest wins the D.G. Anchor Splash title.

The Alphas Tau Omega fraternity sponsors a Greek "Fite Nite" usually held at the Agora. It is an all night boxing competition between fraternities. A fraternity is supposed to give three "boxers" to the event if possible. The fraternity which wins the most matches (usually 3 wins out of 3 matches) wins the Fite Nite trophy. All proceeds from the event go to the effort to fight leukemia.

The Fiji's hold a Queen of Hearts contest around Valentine's Day, which is supposed to be a talent and beauty contest.

Finally, there is Greek Week, filled with odd contests and activities to celebrate the number of years the Greeks have served Ohio State University.

The Greeks publish their own yearbook now, entitled "Encore." Certainly, the Greeks have come a long way since skull and cross-bone days. Many changes have taken place in the past century of Greek activity, although some of the fraternities and sororities rituals are still the same.

Now, the Greek system must undergo change, to leave the 19th century behind them in the massive, almost overwhelming task of preparing for the 21st century.

Heading this effort is Rick Ricketts, USG's former Vice President, winning counterpart of the "Impossible Dream" team of LaRue and Ricketts. LaRue and Ricketts came from nowhere in 1980 to defeat the Lantern's endorsed presidential/vice presidential team, a feat never before seen in Ohio State's history. It is just this same man that Greeks will depend upon to close the Greek system's past and call it "proud history." Instead they will all look toward the "brighter tomorrow."

Moments on the sidelines; pushing aside uncertainty.

The Buckeyes burst into the national spotlight in 1979, when, after being ranked no better than fourth in the Big Ten, swept the season undefeated. Their 11-0 Big Ten Championship sent the Cinderella team to Pasadena, where the Bucks narrowly missed winning the national championship by one point, upset in the final minutes by Charles White, the season's Heisman Trophy Winner, and losing to USC 17-16.

Ohio State so impressed the collegiate sports world that Earle Bruce was named Coach of the Year and his Bucks were picked number one in both AP and UPI polls in 1980.

Troubles began in the opener, when Syracuse gave OSU a serious run for the money, but losing 31-21. The season prior, they were beaten 31-8. Fans sighed relief when the Bucks shut out Minnesota 47-0 and defeated Arizona State 38-21. But UCLA returned to average it's 1979 loss to OSU and stunned the Bucks 17-0. It was during this time that the local press started antagonizing the team, so much in fact, that Earle Bruce suspended press conferences until the heat was off the players.

The Buckeyes invaded Chicago by soundly beating Northwestern 63-0. The team began to roll once more, beating Indiana 27-17, blanking Wisconsin 21-0, and easily defeating Michigan State 48-16.

But the Buckeyes seemed shaken. They looked ahead two weeks at Michigan perhaps a bit ill-at-ease, knowing that the outcome of that game would once again determine the Big Ten championship. It just wasn't like last year, they thought. The polls now placed Michigan ahead of Ohio State and sportswriters were predicting a Michigan win. The Bucks rolled Iowa 41-7 and, one week later, donned their helmets to face Michigan.

Then there was Homecoming and the Illini came to Ohio Stadium. It should have been easy.

It turned out that it wasn't. The game turned into an aerial display with a scoring extravaganza by both teams unmatched in the Big Ten during the entire season. The Buckeyes squeaked out a win 49-42. At least the fans weren't disappointed.

Actually, the team did an outstanding job defensively. Better than 1979. But the Bucks couldn't summon up the offensive drive needed to outscore Michigan. In the end, Michigan defeated Ohio State 9-3. I'm not fond of alliteration, but, the big bad Bucks' backs were broken.

Ohio State summed up the season by losing to Penn State 31-19 in the Fiesta Bowl.

No one can really say what lies ahead in 1981. But one thing is certain. The overkill of the press coverage at the beginning of the season affected the players' confidence. Because they were chosen to be number one, they had to be number one. From the beginning, the Buckeyes were stripped of the most vital human element in their character.

Freedom.

This lack of freedom was of a different sort. They were robbed of the ability to make mistakes. Robbed of the ability to be human. To be a team. To be themselves. And it is this human element that must be re-instilled in the Buckeye character.

The Buckeyes already know they are human. But they need not be superhuman because the fans or press say so. If ever they accomplish wondrous deeds it will be because they choose to do so in the line of duty.

The final task is recognizing the opposition, individually, one at a time. And they will discover an awesome truth.

A face in the crowd.

"Hit the showers, Foster. You're on the Earle Bruce Show tonight."

They are only human, too. And that is why the Ohio State Buckeyes will return to the roses.

And win.

Buckeye Soup!

RETURN TO THE ROSES

Ohio State's basketball season was marked by some triumph, but a little more tragedy with a stinging humiliation by the NCAA.

Not only did the Basketbucks fail to win the Big Ten championship, and not only did they fail to make the playoffs, they failed to get recognition by the NCAA for post season tournament play.

But not all was bad. Ohio State did finish with a winning season (14 wins, 13 losses). One could give Ohio State an average to better than average rating for their performance during the season. But the Bucks big problem was not mediocracy. Trouble lies in the public perception of Ohio State as a mediocre team. Simply stated, there is no perception of the Ohio State Buckeyes as a mediocre team. Not by the press. Not by the public. Not even by the NCAA. Thus, it did come as a surprise that Ohio State was not chosen for the tournament. Other teams with similar records playing weaker teams could, and were chosen for tournament play. And surely this was a puzzling situation for the Ohio State players, having shown their strong comeback ability in the latter part of the season, defeating Purdue in triple overtime 93-92 and a stunning upset over Iowa 78-70.

But these signals never registered with the NCAA, and Ohio State never saw tournament play.

It is a shame.

For the Buckeye team is perceived as an omnipotent Goliath in collegiate basketball. Rumors surged in pre-season 1980 about Ohio State being undefeated in the coming season. When that failed to materialize, the public clamor was "only" for a Big Ten championship. Surely, expectations were still very high. This, of course, is not to say that they were not other factors involved in the NCAA decision. There were. But Eldon Miller's Buckeye basketballers seemingly possess the same dilemma that Earle Bruce's buckeye team possess. And that is the super power image that traditionally is attributed to Ohio State athletics. While it is true that OSU has a powerful athletic machine, it is fallacy to believe in any terms invulnerability. It simply doesn't exist. In any team. In any university. Nor does it exist in the pros. Players are not always as good as the fans think they are. They are only as good as they think they are.

While fans think "What will become of our team without Herb Williams?", the players will be thinking "How can we best mold the freshmen into our team?"

Fans tend to think in more romantic terms of hero-worship. And while some players idolize others; there is no one-man team on the Buckeye squad. So says Eldon Miller.

But the fans never-the-less have been good to the Bucks. They obviously play better in front of their own. Eleven of their fourteen wins were at home while nine of their thirteen losses were on the road.

But the Buckeyes will not be looking back this year, and the lack of NCAA tournament games in 1981 will only fuel the furnace in Miller's team. The Bucks will leave their losses behind and will go on to win. Not because everyone will expect them to win, but because they choose to win. They will not spend time worrying about the abilities of teams rated better than they are. They will spend time dealing with it.

The Ohio State Buckeyes will display the professionalism that lingers within them. And the NCAA will take a second look at a misplaced team. The coach will turn to them, smiling, and say, "Okay, it's Miller time."

NCAA COMEBACK?

OSU women's basketball enjoyed a slightly better season than the men. Despite the fact that our Lady Bucks dropped their final two games to Illinois State (73-70) and Detroit (54-49), they finished with a winning overall record of 17-15. The women lost to North Carolina and Pittsburgh, but soundly defeated Northern Kentucky (85-56) in the Carolina Christmas Classic last season. Our Lady Bucks went on to Colorado State and Central Missouri State in the Jennies Classic held in Missouri and won two out of three in the Big Ten Women's Basketball Championship, losing only to Minnesota 65-48. The women swept the OASW State Division I Championship, rolling over Bowling Green State 74-52, Cincinnati 65-63, and Kent State 67-62. After beating Indiana 60-54 in the MAIAW Regional Division I Championship, their hopes were crushed when narrowly defeated by Illinois State and Detroit.

Our Lady Bucks have been shown to be a potential powerhouse in women's basketball. They are at their best when the pressure is on. Look for the Lady Bucks to become another power in OSU sports.

To the Class of 1981:

Several years ago, a mutual acceptance and expectation marked your entrance to The Ohio State University. Between then and now there have been many opportunities for us to fulfill those expectations.

We have cooperated in experiences by which you acquired the knowledge and skills for a lifetime of learning, service and accomplishment. That cooperation represents a shared investment. We were, and are, a part of each other.

Your graduation does not mean an end to the mutual acceptance and expectation. The University's contributions will continue to make an impact throughout your life.

The University has grown and prospered for over a century. As inheritors of a bright tradition, we have the right to be proud of our past. We have the opportunity, and the responsibility, to fulfill the promise of our past by our actions in the future.

We seem to live in a world where the only constant is change itself. The experience of your University career, the knowledge and the skills you have acquired, will enable you to meet the challenges of ever present change. I am confident the University leaves its impression on you as you have left yours on the University.

Congratulations, and best wishes.

Letter from the Editor:

Contentment is not merely the knowledge and advancement of an education. Satisfaction is limited when measured in material gain. One must also be concerned with a capacity to cope with life's misfortunes. Once someone has that ability, then one must inspect his capacity to reach out to others in need.

Of course, we are not so blind to realize that education is vital. Education is the vein to the discovery of life. But life is only truly discovered through one's emotional commitment toward mankind. And this is where contentment lies.

Contentment is an educated heart.

Commitment is a driving force, the better half of wisdom which transforms one from beggar to sage and sets him along the path of winning ways. It then, are only those on this path which people remember through time. They have become legends. If not legends in their own time, at least legends somewhere in time.

Yesterday, legends were made by noble deeds, the knights in armor who struggled valiantly in victory or died nobly in defeat. Most envision Don Quixote on a white stallion, riding the crest of a patriots dream. But tomorrow's legends will not be romantic idealists building castles in the clouds.

Tomorrow's legends will mark the dawn of a new age. They will have a compassion for the betterment of mankind, a heart burning of newborn commitment to educate the world. It will not matter if they are young or old, for they would have "stepped the legend of their youth into the noon." For they will always be young. Tomorrow's legends will confront, battle, and conquer at the battle of Armageddon.

And that battle is within one's self.

I wonder how many among those of 1981 will become legends in their own time.

"THE END OF AN ERA"

... life goes on

Carmen Ohio

Oh! come let's sing Ohio's praise,
And songs to Alma Mater raise;
While our hearts rebounding thrill,
With joy which death alone can still.

Summer's heat or winter's cold,
The seasons pass, the years will roll;
Time and change will surely show
How firm thy friendship O-Hi-O.
